2011 Early Childhood Conference

Session 1 Workshops

Select one from A-E

A. How To Really Create A Developmentally Appropriate Classroom!

*Cindy Terebush, Director,
Early Childhood Specialist*

Learn about the ages & stages of the children in your classroom and the learning theories that support developmentally appropriate practice. See how those theories are used in the New Jersey Preschool Standards and how they can be applied in your classrooms. Review different ways to communicate information about developmental appropriateness to parents and staff.

B. Speech And Language Development In Young Children

Jennifer Durrua, Speech and Language Pathologist

This workshop will help educators become more familiar with speech and language development. Developmental norms, enhancement of speech and language skills and how to help guide parents in developing children's skills will be discussed.

C. Quality Rating And Improvement System (QRIS)

Amanda Blagman, Policy Analyst and NJ Build Team Leader, ACNJ; Dr. Lorraine Cooke, Build Team Member, NJAEYC VP, Public Policy

The NJ Build Team has developed a Quality Rating and Improvement System (QRIS). Nearly every state in the country has developed a QRIS which is either being piloted or is in full operation. In this workshop, you will learn about the scale and gain knowledge of how you can prepare your early learning program to be ready for its full implementation.

D. Infant Toddler Play As A Way Of Enhancing Intellectual, Social & Emotional Development

Angie DeFazio, Trainer/Consultant, Is It Good For Children, LLC

Ron Lally, co-director of WestEd's Center for Child & Family Studies, says, "If you watch infants closely, you will see that they clearly do not differentiate between work and play, and amusement and learning. You will see that in almost every waking moment they are occupied with thoughts and actions of discovery and accomplishment. They seem to have an agenda. They are busy in what some might call play, others work, others amusement, and others learning. In fact they are busy with all of these things at once." This workshop focuses on what children are learning at the three stages of infancy and the role of the caregiver in facilitating the learning. Ideas and hands-on materials will be available to play with!!

E. Let's Make Music

Jeff Williamson, BA, MA Early Childhood Ed., MA Urban Ed., MA Early Childhood Special Ed., Kindergarten Teacher, Early Literacy Instructor NJCU

This fast paced, hands-on music and movement workshop will enable you to learn new songs and experiences using instruments such as kazoos, ukuleles and drums in your classroom.

I. Why Hold A Crying Baby: Emotional Development

*Angie DeFazio, Trainer/Consultant,
Is It Good For Children, LLC*

The theories of Abraham Maslow and Erik Erikson will be discussed as they relate to the social and emotional development of infants and toddlers. Participants will learn the significance of attachment, affect attunement, cues, continuity of care, bonding, contingent communication, synchronicity and temperament as it relates to the development of infants and toddlers.

J. The Name Of The Game

*Jeff Williamson, BA, MA Early Childhood Ed.,
MA Urban Ed., MA Early Childhood Special Ed.,
Kindergarten Teacher, Early Literacy Instructor
NJCU*

Learn how to create props, instructional materials and games to enhance learning in the early childhood literacy curriculum. Emphasis will be placed on low cost, dollar store and found materials as a basis for game construction.
